

In “Vorogait Parats” (Chapter 502) along with the assistance to science and culture, particularly prioritized was the encouragement of innovations, according to which, for the creation of new, high quality products (of European kind) the Armenian dynasty should offer financial incentive to the creators.

This is an issue which is currently extremely topical in terms of technological development.

Conclusion

Summing up, it should be noted that the state and regional government in ancient and medieval Armenia was realized via legal regulatory principles, consistent with the time and through sufficient constitutionality. Within the frames of Armenian intellectual culture, certain methodological bases were worked out, whereas the accumulated past experience, cultural heritage and the lessons of history in particular, deserve special attention in terms of the appropriate orientation of the civil society, the development of political thought and growth of efficiency in public administration.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Avagyan R. 2001. The treasury of Armenian judicial fought (IX c. BC –XIX c.). Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Incicean Gh. 1835. Antiquities of Armenia. Vol.2, Venice (in Arm.).
- Kanonagirk Hayots 1964. Book one. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Krkyasharyan S.M. 2005. State system of ancient Armenia (VI c. BC –IV c. AD). Yerevan (in Arm.).
- History 1971. History of the Armenian people. vol. 1 (eds. S.Yeremyan). Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Łazar Parpetsi 1982. History of the Armenians. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Matevosyan R.I. 1990. State structure and administrative system of Bagratid Armenia. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Mkhitar Gosh 2001. The Armenian Lawcode. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Movses Khorenatsi 1990. History of the Armenians. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Nerses Shnorhali 1991. Toukht Endhanrakan. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Vorogayt parats 2002. Vorogayt parats. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Suqiasyan A.G. 1978. History and Law of the Cilician Armenian state. Yerevan (in Arm.).
- Suvaryan Yu.M., Mirzoyan V.A. 2013. Theory and history of Public governance. Yerevan (in Arm.).